Searle Grain Co's Crop Testing Plan

The annual Searle Grain Company's Crop Testing Field Day will be held this year on Monday, July 30th at M. G. Clevers. Various plots of different varieties of wheat, oats and barley will be examined and several competent officials will be present. This annual field day has been very popular in the past and has brought astonishingly good results to farmers in the way of helping them improve their crops. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

Enjoyable Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Gatenby and family returned last Sunday from a holiday trip which included Spokane, Vancouver and other cities enroute. Mr. Gatenby says two weeks is too short a time for this trip. Two months would be necessary to take in the interesting points. The trip to Vancouver via Spokane was made in three days, while the return trip by the Canadian route took four days. The remainder of the time was spent visiting relatives in Vancouver.

Local & General

Mr. and Mrs. Kramer and family, accompanied by Virginia Farmer, left Tuesday for Waterton Lakes, where they will holiday for a week.

Many from Champion attended the Plainfield U. F. A. picnic and stampee held at Smith's bridge on Wednesday. The display of riding and bucking was splendid. The dance held in O. Smith's barn in the evening was well attended.

Character Makes The Man

In a little magazine sent regularly to the writer of this column through the courtesy and thoughtfulness of a friend, and which we always read with pleasure and profit, and from which we frequently quote, there recently appeared a short article that is both timely and worthy of consideration in these rather troublous days when we are inclined to place responsibility for all our ills upon governments, institutions, systems—in fact, upon anything and everything except our own human frailties. The magazine article referred to reads as follows:

"Most of the ingenious schemes for making this a better world fall down because they assume that man is an angelic creature who would dance singing through the streets, with garlands in his hair, if only the chains of circumstance could be stricken from him. The trouble is that man isn't an angelic creature. He can be about the most every member of the animal kingdom. When he's mean, he makes the sabre-toothed tiger look like a domesticated tabby; and for ruthlessness he can bring bluffs to the cheeks of a cobra. On the other hand, it's just as big a mistake to assume that man is all mean. He rises just as high as he falls. Nothing in the jungle can match him for courage and self-sacrifice. If he can be a beast, he can also be like those gentlemen who stood on the deck of the doomed 'Titanic,' singing in the face of death. As Byron said, he is 'half devil, half deity.'"

For many years, almost a century in fact, it has been an accepted idea in all democratically governed countries that education was the royal road to sweetness and light. Practically no one questioned it. Laws were enacted making education compulsory, and more money was cheerfully poured into the providing of free education for all children, always in the belief that when people are educated, a golden age would dawn. People in all our so-called civilized countries are now fairly well educated and accepted meanings of the word "civilized" are no longer in doubt. Apparently, good and splendid as it undoubtedly is, education in itself is not the miracle-worker it was supposed to be. And the trouble is that we have continued book-learning and education, and have not kept store on knowledge of facts that we have forgotten about character.

With many sincere people the tendency now is to rely on legislation to accomplish all the reforms which religion and education have failed to bring about in our lives. It is even more dangerous apparently to believe that both education and the church have failed to develop human character and thus eradicate selfishness, meanness and dishonesty, but that where these powerful agencies have failed, parliaments and legislatures can succeed through the enactment and enforcement of man-made laws and governmental administration of purely man-made social and economic systems. This is a wholly false conception, and if our schools, colleges and churches should ever act upon it they would learn when too late how serious a mistake they had made.

Recognizing the truth of Byron's observation that man is half devil, half deity, the function of the church and of all forms of religion is to cultivate and develop the good in man and thus meet the needs of his nobility and meanness inherent in human nature, to inculcate the true principles of life and living, to teach the beauty, the joy, the happiness of true Christian living; in a word, to build up character.

And the function of the schools is to support as they are by the State is the counterpart of the church. It is not merely to impart knowledge but to train the human intellect and develop man's reasoning powers so as to enable him to think clearly, choose wisely, act with discernment and discretion and thereby attain to a full realization of only his own rights and privileges but to a full appreciation of the rights and privileges of his fellow men, and of his own obligations to society as a whole; in a word to live as an intelligent, informed member of the human community.

Parliaments and legislatures have large and important duties to discharge, but under our democratic systems these legislative and administrative bodies will be, as they are intended to be, but a reflection of the views and opinions of the people as a whole. This, however, is not the function of the discharge of their accepted functions by raising the standard of intelligence and in the development of character, thus building up personal character and higher standards in thought and living, will benefit all of our legislation and all administration. Much more of permanent beneficial character can be effected in this way than by the definite commitment of churches and schools to any particular set of political policies, social reforms, or economic systems of the material world.

If the people themselves are right, if they are men and women of character and conviction, if they are educated and intelligent, unselfish, honest and God-fearing, parliaments and legislatures, and the acts of these bodies, will be a reflection of the character of the people, and if the people of any nation are not of this type, neither will their governments be, and all the propaganda of churches and schools will not make them so.

If we would improve our institutions and systems and governments, we must bring about a steady improvement in the character of the people, and in the bringing about of such improvement lies the first and paramount duty of our churches and educational institutions.

An Era Of Suspicion

In the world as it is to-day—there is a greater extent even than in the days when Lord Metham and Lord Milner surveyed it—there are overwhelming difficulties in achieving anything like universal peace and freedom.

For the moment an era of suspicious nationalism seems to make that ideal more remote than ever. But that unquestionably the way to attain it lies through the gradual grouping of peoples as they are prepared to work and trade together and to live at peace for all time with one another; and the one group ready formed for this great purpose—bound by all the ties of history, tradition and common requirements—is the existing group of the British nations and dependencies. To displace so vast a potential force for good would be something worse than folly. To displace it, as some of our Socialists are fond of doing, is to stultify their own professions. Surely the whole purpose of British statesmen in every capital of the Empire, whether they are Conservatives or Socialists, manufacturers or farmers, should be to consolidate it, to strengthen it, to attract to it like-minded lovers of peace wherever they may be found.—London Times.

New York Via Arctic

Proposed Air Route Would Find Favor With Arctic

The polar regions may soon become as familiar to British airlines as the Irish Sea or the Channel are to British seamen. The air route to the Far East is nearly halfway by proceeding via the North Pole. If directional wireless proved the success hoped and expected of it, the 400-mile hops between wireless stations at Thorsvaag (Faroe Islands), Reykjavik (Iceland), Angkor (Greenland) on the east coast of Greenland and Godthaab on the west, and Resolute Island at the southern extremity of Baffin Island, would make it possible for flyers for several well-founded reasons. If it should prove a reliable proposition to cross the Arctic by air, the route would be largely independent of fog and other forms of bad visibility. Besides, though the length of this route from England to Japan is 4,500 miles, and therefore greater than the direct route, a great advantage lies in the fact that it can be divided into 400-mile stages.

Asleep For Two Years

Chicago Girl Shows Signs Of Rousing From Long Slumber.

Darting glances from expressive eyes have raised the hopes of physicians that Patricia McGuire, the sleeping beauty of Chicago, may soon arise from her long slumber.

For more than two years the attractive 26-year-old stenographer has been asleep—victim of a strange disease. Medical men have visited her bedside and attempted to find the secret of the ailment.

Patricia's sister and mother said frequently open her eyes and follows them about the room. She is unable to talk or move. Apparently having suffered no serious physical effects, Patricia gained about ten pounds and several days ago her diet—four feedings are administered—was cut down.

Finding Ready Market

Demand From British Buyers For Canada's Dressed Poultry

Dressed poultry from substantial quantities in the British Isles. From January 1 to May 31, 935,500 pounds have been exported, an increase of 537,122 pounds compared with the corresponding period of 1933. Meanwhile the demand from British buyers continues active for the quality of the shipments have been the best required in every way, says an announcement from the department of agriculture.

Nearly 134,000,000 pounds of tobacco were grown in China last year, breaking all production records for the world in that country.

New Law Has Teeth

Canada Tightens Up Regulations In Regard To Firearms

One bit of legislation recently passed by Canada's Parliament has not been as prominently played up in the newspapers as its importance would seem to justify.

For years many Canadian papers have stressed the desirability of making it more difficult to secure and to keep revolvers.

The matter has been under discussion at several sessions of parliament and several changes in the law were effected, but it is only now that the Dominion's legislators have passed a measure that seems to possess teeth that can bite.

Henceforth it will not only be necessary for the purchaser of a firearm small enough to be concealed, to obtain a permit for the possession of such a weapon, but the new law provides that every Canadian now in possession of a revolver must register it with the authorities, and there is a further clause that repeaters of firearms must also register all the police each time a revolver is brought to them for attention.

Owners of weapons will be given a time limit within which they will be required to register these firearms, and after that time there will be a heavy fine in case of an unregistered revolver being found.

These new regulations are more drastic than anything yet passed at Ottawa, and it is hoped that they will make it less easy for folk to come into possession of firearms.

Swimming And Health

An Exercise That Has Come To The Front As A Valuable Form Of Recreation

A well-known swimming instructor states, "The interest in swimming has been stimulated tremendously in the last few years. People are indulging in this healthful recreation throughout the year."

Greater indulgence would naturally be the result of the nation's health. It may also be the means of saving the swimmer and another's health. As an exercise swimming has few exercises with which to be compared. It may be performed to suit the age and physical condition of the swimmer. The art of swimming has also developed marvellously, states a writer on "Health". In the early days of the world's health, the art of swimming was commonly used. The trudgeon and single over-land stroke were never evolved. The writer outlines the methods of swimming and states, "Make up your mind that you will learn or improve." The crawl stroke is the most popular of all swim strokes. Champions all over the world use it and it is fast becoming the stroke for everybody. In explaining the crawl stroke, the writer states, "Make up your mind that you will learn or improve." The crawl stroke is the most popular of all swim strokes. Champions all over the world use it and it is fast becoming the stroke for everybody. In explaining the crawl stroke, the writer states, "Make up your mind that you will learn or improve."

Aviator Was Lucky

Gleed Nine Miles Without Propeller And Landed Safely

To lose the propeller of the aeroplane he was piloting, glide nine miles without it, finally to come down in the water, and escape unhurt was the experience of Dr. Georges Milette, Montreal surgeon, amateur flyer and medical examiner for Dominion Airways Services.

Shortly after leaving St. Hilaire, Quebec, the propeller of Dr. Milette's plane dropped off. The flying doctor glided for nine miles before falling into the Yamaska river near St. Hyacinthe.

The greatest loss in weight in eggs in cold storage through the evaporation of water occurs during the first month or six weeks. Without a sufficient supply of available water, eggs may lose one per cent, or more.

It is believed by the Kulin of Australia that the spirits of the dead ascend to heaven by the rays of the sun.

Reaping The Harvest

Far East Has Awakened To Machine Age

Europe no longer can exploit the rest of the world as a market, and now, after destroying the civilization of the Orient and India, reaps the harvest, celebrated Frederick W. Norwood, celebrated preacher of the City Temple, London, England, at Vancouver.

Returning from an extended trip, he said the Far East had awakened to the machine-age era.

"In Japan you have a nation that has learned the lessons of western civilization, put them into practice and now is sending back a surplus of machine-made goods," he said.

"The missionary was not to be blamed. There were, he recalled, 100 commercial travellers propagating industrial ideas to every single missionary. There, too, were great changes in China and India.

"These people are increasingly conscious of what we have taken from them. We have got to think of humanity: stop putting tags on things and letting it go at that," he concluded.

Canadian Voodooism

Human Credibility Provides One Of The Serious Barriers To Medical Progress

An article in "Health," published by the Canadian Medical Journal, points out the necessity for the general public realizing that many so-called cures are nothing but fakes. The article tells some rather interesting facts about the credulity of people and the value of the fakery. The writer states: "Perhaps it is futile to tell the public about these tragic occurrences, perhaps it is wasting time to ridicule the faith and charlatan. Ethically the doctor can promise no one a cure but these medical gangsters, after getting their money, laugh at the helpless sufferer from cancer and the dying tuberculosis patient and promise him a cure."

Often times neglected cases have been accepted the advice of their own surgeons and are handed at the same time a death certificate.

Warders Well Protected If French Convicts Attempt Mutiny

Scolding Saint is Always Held Ready for Use on the Two Hundred and eighty convicts bound for the French penal settlement on French Guiana, which includes Devil's Island, which recently embarked in the convict ship La Martinique at La Rochelle. During the voyage the convicts are kept in cages under the constant surveillance of warders, who, in the event of attempted mutiny, would be able to turn steam on them.

A Clever Idea

German ingenuity has solved the problem of looking over the heads of a crowd without getting a stick of gum.

At every big street parade in Berlin now, and there is one almost daily, scores of vendors make their ways through the crowd selling pencils.

With a pencil it is possible to have front seat even if you are standing in the rear ranks.

Keep Up Poisoning For Hoppers

Officials of the federal and provincial departments of agriculture working on the grasshopper campaign in Alberta have issued a strong appeal to farmers in the infested areas to redouble their efforts during the next few weeks, declaring that the critical point has now been reached. 'There is a general impression that poisoning operations can no longer be carried on to advantage,' declares H. L. Seasmans, of the Dominion entomological service at Lethbridge, who has been working in co-operation with the provincial field crops branch who have been directing the campaign against the hoppers.
"Time spent on spreading bait during July and August is well repaid, not only in actual crop saving but in reducing the hopper menace next year."

Wins Prize

Philip Bastin was successful in winning second prize in Group 2, in the contest which was put on by the Lethbridge Herald to increase the circulation of their paper for the period from May 15th to June 30th. The prize awarded to the winning carrier was a bag of golf clubs and balls valued at nine dollars.

Mrs. A. W. Jopling received a telephone message from relatives in Grand Junction, Cal. on Friday evening. The call came through clearly and distinctly.

Instant-Gas Cooking for Homes Beyond
the Gas Mains

Model No. 902
A popular priced range included in Coleman's ever-wide selection.

JUST light a match, turn a valve... your new Coleman Instant-Gas lights instantly
...right at the burner! It has no preheater. No waiting. Put on your pots and pans and start cooking
"right now". That's modern gas service! The finest stove you ever saw for homes out beyond the gas mains. Economical to operate... makes and burns its own gas from regular untreated motor fuel.

Your dealer will be glad to show you all the many new, modern, up-to-the-minute improvements on these dandy new stoves. There's a model just "made to order" for your cooking requirements... at a price that will fit your purse.

Let him demonstrate the new Coleman Instant-Gas. See for yourself what a stove it is!
